ditions as the Snake and Nome Rivers early in the 2023 season and got a late start beginning operations on July 25. The tower operated through August 20 with 15 days of missed or partial counts. The total escapement estimate for the tower was 63 kings, 6,045 chum, 5,715 pinks, 18 sockeye, and 714 coho salmon. These escapement numbers should be considered a minimum escapement due to the late start and the number of days that were missing or incomplete.

Kwiniuk River Tower - ADF&G

The Kwiniuk River tower began operations on July 5. The tower ceased operations on September 2 and had 13 days of missed or incomplete counts. The total escapement estimate is 18 kings, 3,600 chum, 18,701 pinks, 5,433 coho, and 18 sockeye salmon. Prior to the tower becoming operational the department flew aerial surveys of the Kwiniuk River and counted 2,000 chum salmon above the tower site.

Inglutalik River Tower -NSEDC

The tower became operational on June 28 and ceased operations on July 27 with 20 days of missed or partial counts. The estimated passage of 204 kings, 1,788 chum, and 192 pinks should be considered a minimal estimate based on the number of days the tower was inoperable.

Ungalik River Tower - NSEDC

The tower became operational on Jun 28 and ceased operations on August 11 with 16 days of missed or partial counts. The estimated passage of 66 king, 4,803 chum, 372 coho, and 15,441 pinks should be considered a minimum escapement due to missed and partial passage days.

Shaktoolik Tower - NSEDC

The tower began operations on June 26 and ceased operations on August 19 with 27 days of missed or incomplete passage estimates. The estimated escapement of 780 king, 5,031 chum, 29,349 pinks, 1,590 coho, and 78 sockeye salmon should be considered a minimum escapement due to the amount of time the tower was inoperable in 2023.

North River Tower - NSEDC with assistance from ADF&G.

The tower became operational on June 24 and operated until August 18 with 10 days of missed or partial escapement estimates. Total escapement estimates are 483 kings, 597 chum, 597 coho, and 11,162 pink salmon and represent minimal escapement estimates.

Unalakleet River Weir— ADF&G, Native Village of Unalakleet, United States BLM, and NSEDC with funding provided by U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service - Office of Subsistence Management.

The weir became operational on July 1 and ran through August 15 with 12 days of missed or incomplete passage. There were 40 kings, 13,358 chum, 4,599 coho, 7,208 pinks, and 164 sockeye salmon. The weir was installed approximately two weeks after the target installation date causing the weir to miss the first part of the king salmon return in 2023. The late installation and days of missed or incomplete counts make escapement counts a minimal estimate of actual escapement.

Commercial Salmon Fishing

Commercial salmon fishing in Norton Sound closed by regulation on September 7 in 2023. Escapements in northern Norton Sound were stronger than escapements in southern Norton Sound and allowed for more liberal fishing time in Subdistricts 1 through 3 early in the 2023 season. Pink salmon returns were weak in Norton Sound and resulted in limited commercial openings directed at pink salmon. Coho salmon were below average throughout Norton Sound with the exception of the Kwiniuk River. Commercial fishing was suspended in Subdistricts 1, 2, 4, 5, and 6 when coho salmon escape-ments and catch rates did not meet expectations. Total commercial harvest for Norton Sound are as follows:

Subdistrict 1 (Nome): 4 permits caught 1,696 chum weighing 11,364 pounds, 65 sockeye weighing 258 pounds, 738 coho weighing 4,567 pounds, and 18 pinks weighing 93 pounds in 12 commercial fishing periods.

Alaska's Health Department works through one food stamp backlog only to confront another

By Claire Stremple, Alaska Beacon

Officials from Alaska's Division of Public Assistance said its staff worked through the backlog of applications for food aid that stressed Alaska families for more than a year. But that success came at the cost of what officials are calling a "new" backlog.

Division Director Deb Etheridge took over leadership in the midst of the backlog and said getting through the old backlog is a success.

"We've got to celebrate those wins and the staff feel really good about it," Etheridge said. The division got through the backlog two months faster than officials projected.

The division fell behind on newer applications and while staff worked through backlogged cases. Etheridge said this time there are 6,000 Alaskans waiting for food aid.

She said the division prioritized getting benefits to the Alaskans who had been waiting the longest. "Our federal partners made it clear that we needed to get through the old backlog — don't worry about staying current as much as getting some of those old ones off. So that's what our focus was," she said.

Since July, the division has been processing less than 20% of new food stamp applications on time. The average decision time for SNAP benefits was more than 80 days — more than four times the division's goal and more than double the federal limit.

"There's no perfect plan," Etheridge said. "But we got thousands of cases worked."

She said the oldest applications in the new backlog are from April and May, but most of them are from June. And she said they should be easier to get through for two main reasons: The staff is now practiced at moving through a backlog and, compared to the previous backlog, applications from two to four months ago are relatively fresh and faster to process.

The slow processing time for new applications is the cost of a much faster turnaround for renewals. Almost 40 percent of those applications were processed on time in July, a marked improvement from last December through this April, when the number fell below 10 percent.

Subsistence Fishing

Subsistence fishing schedules in Norton Sound have ended in both fresh and marine waters and the Norton Sound District is open to subsistence net fishing 7 days per week in designated subsistence areas. However, beach seining closed Wednesday, August 15, and is no longer a legal subsistence gear type.

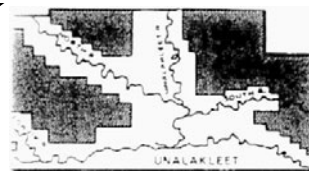

Port Clarence

The Pilgrim River will remain closed to subsistence net fishing in 2023. Escapement of sockeye salmon to the Pilgrim River has been weak and did not meet escapement goals.

General Information

Salmon subsistence permits are due to be reported to the department on October 6. Reporting subsistence harvests can be done at the Fish and Game office in Nome during regular business hours Monday through Friday from 8:00 a.m. till 5:00 p.m. or online at <https://www.adfg.alaska.gov/index.cfm?adfg=fishingSubsistence.main>.
